You win these cards by being lucky or by answering the questions correctly.

When you land on a orange square, we ask you a orange question, linked to the characters cards. For the green one's related to women in general.

The purple squares, you pick a chance card.

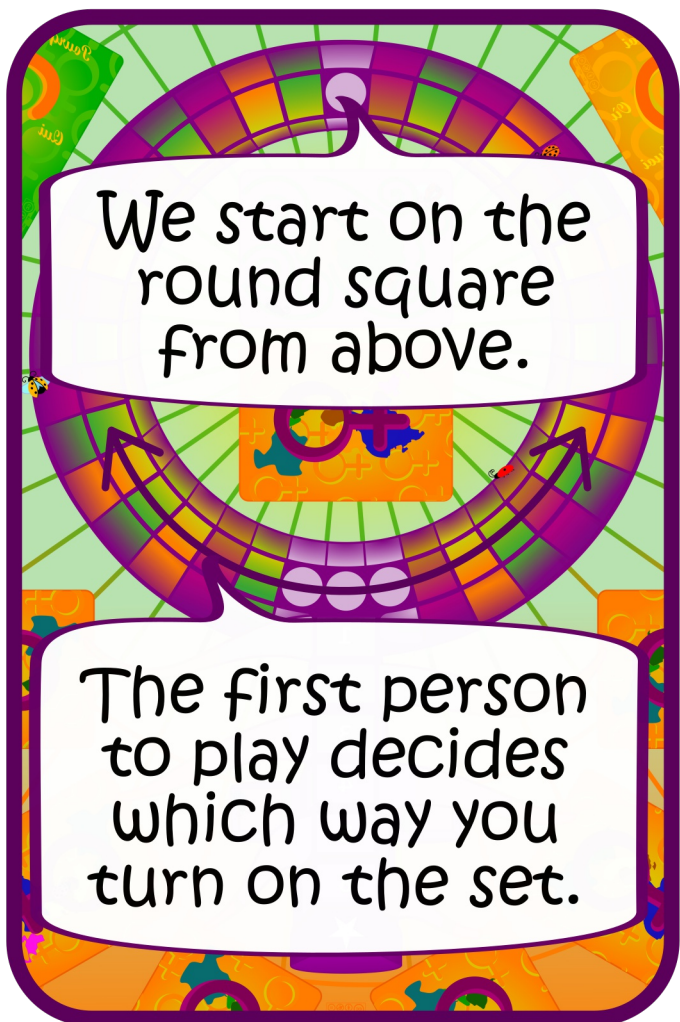

To start the game everyone rolls the die, the lowest score wins.

We start on the round square from above.

The first person to play decides which way you turn on the set.

Two choices are available to us to gather the cards of the same family.

You can collect all 6 cards yourself.

You can also collect the cards by cooperating with others. It's up to you to decide.

Once the family is together, you put the cards around the staircase, it is then unlocked and you can go both ways.

To be able to climb the stairs you have to fall right on the round square in the middle.

To climb the stairs, you must answer the green questions.

Each time you answer correctly, you move one square forward.

If you're wrong, you pass your turn.

To win you have to get to the last step.

If you have exhausted all the questions you can create and share them on the game's website.

But you can also play the game of the 7 families just with the character cards.

To play it you take a family away to have 6 characters per family.

For example, the category of artists, and you reunite families according to the continent.

But you can keep all the cards and the first to make a family but you need to decide from the beginning if the families are reunited according to the continent or category.

The women who have been chosen to form families are not necessarily the most emblematic of their continent, but they are all exceptional women.

Many of them could have corresponded to several categories, here we wanted to highlight one of the facets of these resourceful women.

Good game and a big thank you to the players, testers, markers, inspirers, donors,...
